TOOLS NEEDED:

- Scissors (for cutting the paracord)
- Lighter or heat source (for sealing the ends of the paracord)
- Work surface (to keep your area tidy while crafting)
- Optional: A clipboard or tape (to hold your projects in place while working)

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Determine Length of Paracord

- Measure your wrist and add about 1-2 inches (for comfort).
- For most bracelet designs, you'll need about 1 foot of paracord per inch of wrist size.

2. Prepare the Buckle

- Thread one end of the paracord through one side of the buckle and pull it until it is halfway, folding the cord in half.
- Loop the cord through to secure it on the buckle with a cow hitch knot (or simple loop).

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTIONS:

3. Set Up for Weaving

- Attach the other end of the paracord to the second buckle half. Make sure the bracelet length matches your wrist size.
- Ensure that your setup is tight and secure to avoid loose weaves.

4. Start Knotting

- Begin with a basic cobra weave:
 - Bring the left cord over the center strands, then the right cord over the left cord.
 - Tuck the right cord under the center strands and pull it up through the left loop.
 - Pull tight and repeat on alternating sides.

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTIONS:

5. Continue the Pattern

- Repeat the cobra weave until you reach the other buckle.
- Ensure each knot is tight and even.

6. Finish the Bracelet

- Once you've completed the weave, trim the excess paracord with scissors.
- Use the lighter to carefully melt the ends to prevent fraying. Press down gently to secure.

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTIONS:

7. Attach the Bracelet

- Clip the buckle together, and your bracelet is ready to wear!

TIPS FOR BEST RESULTS:

- Paracord Melting: Melted paracord can be hot; press it down with something metal (not your fingers).
- Experiment with Patterns: Try different patterns like the fishtail or king cobra weave once you're comfortable with the basics.
- Safety: Always use caution with the lighter and scissors, especially around children.
